

Agnone

Index of All Persons and Related Family Group Records

(16 February 2025)

What is this Index? The Agnone team digitized all 484 Agnone civil and church genealogical books from the 1600s, 1700s, and 1800s. The team then began indexing each book by placing on a separate row of an Excel spreadsheet the key information from each entry. That process took 17 years, ending in 2024. The result is a master spreadsheet containing close to half a million entries from all those books. Using that master spreadsheet, the Agnone team has spent years identifying close to 6,000 Agnone families with one FGR for each family and with all entries found for each family member. Those families include more than 48,000 individuals, which is over 50% of the total estimated population of Agnone for those three centuries. This Index of All Persons lists all those individual persons in alphabetical order, and then identifies under each the FGRs that include that person. Since the Index is massive, over 6,000 pages, it is best to view online. Once you find a person of interest, you can discover considerable information about that person from the FGRs listed below that person. These can then be freely downloaded from this website and viewed in Excel. They are all in Excel format to allow expansion/contraction of the various columns.

What does the + sign mean? When you find the desired person, some of the FGRs listed under that person's name may include a + sign at the end. This means that there was specific research focused on that person. If there is no +, this means that the person was merely mentioned in the FGR, typically as the parent of the husband or wife, or a child's spouse.

Trouble finding a person? The spelling of names often varied or evolved, including the use of prefixes. This is particularly true in the 1600s and 1700s. It may help if you look at the separate document entitled Agnone Surnames Reviews & Standardizations for alternative spellings, which lists alphabetically all common Agnone surnames ignoring any prefix. If you cannot find the person by scrolling through the alphabet, then try using the normal search function for pdf documents with all or just a portion of the person's name. If all else fails, try re-checking later since this document is regularly updated as additional FGRs are completed.

Is the print too small? If the print of this document is too small, you can enlarge it after it is opened as with other pdf documents.
